

Court Judgments and Orders

Trial is the formal hearing of evidence with the purpose of rendering a decision or verdict.

A verdict is the decision made by a jury after a hearing of the evidence.

Judgment means is to make a decision on a legal matter and is the order of the court after hearing the evidence.

Mandate is an order from a higher court or authority to a lower court or authority to take action on the judgment.

Relief from Judgment. A petition to a court to correct or to be relieved from it under certain circumstances, including the judgment has been satisfied, released, or discharged.

Res Judicata is a legal principle that prevents the same issue from being litigated again between the same parties after a final judgment has been reached.

Summary Judgment is court process where a court evaluates the evidence and determines whether one party is entitled to judgment without going to trial. To obtain summary judgment, a petitioner must state the undisputed facts, and the law and establish that the petitioner is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Peace and Protective Orders. The purpose of a peace order is to provide individuals with a tool to protect themselves from harassment or harm. In filing a peace order, the petitioner can ask the court to order the respondent to stay away from them, stop contacting them, or refrain from engaging in certain behaviors that could cause harm.

A protective order is typically sought by a person who has a specific relationship with the respondent such as a spouse, child, parent or cohabitant. They cover acts of domestic violence, which include abuse or the threat of abuse. A peace order can be sought by any person who is the victim of certain types of harmful or threatening conduct, regardless of their relationship with the responding, and it covers such acts as harassment, stalking or trespassing.

Temporary Restraining Order (TRO) is an order by the court to restrain certain action and can be granted if there is: a violation of the law or someone's rights and a substantial likelihood that the petitioner will prevail on the merits; the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm in the absence of a TRO; and the public will benefit from issuance of the TRO.

Replevin is a legal remedy that allows a person to recover personal property taken wrongfully or unlawfully, and to obtain compensation for the resulting losses.

Qui Tam is a court action on behalf of the King or kingdom and oneself.
